[Read a first time ... 23rd January, 1922.]

A BILL

intituled

AN Ordinance to provide for the assessment of Rubber Land in Rural Board Areas for the purposes of Ordinances No. 135 (Municipal) and No. 114 (Education Board).

It is hereby enacted by the Governor of the Straits Settlements with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council thereof as follows:—

Short title. 1. This Ordinance may be cited as the Rubber Lands Assessment Ordinance, 1922.

Definitions. 2. For the purposes of this Ordinance—

“Rubber Land” means any land planted with rubber within a Rural Board area and comprising an area of not less than 25 acres whether in one or more separate blocks under one control or management. The Governor may appoint such persons as he may think fit to be members of a Committee for the purposes of this Ordinance and may add members to or remove members from such Committee. The Committee so appointed shall be known as the Assessment Committee.

Rate of assessment to be fixed at beginning of each quarter for previous quarter. 3.—(1) In the first fourteen days of each quarter of the year, the Assessment Committee shall prescribe a rate to be paid in respect of each pound of rubber produced on rubber land during the preceding quarter and a notice of the rate fixed by the Assessment Committee shall be published in the Gazette.

Limit of such rate. (2) The rate referred to in sub-section (1) shall not exceed one cent per pound when the average selling price of Singapore Standard Smoked Sheet for the preceding quarter is not less than 35 cents and not more than 50 cents per pound, 2½ cents per pound when such average price is above 50 cents per pound and not more than $1 per pound, 3¼ cents per pound when such average price is above $1 per pound and not more than $1.50 per pound, and 6 cents per pound when such average price is above $1.50 per pound. When the average price is less than 35 cents per pound, no rate shall be prescribed.

4. In the first fourteen days of each quarter of the year the owner or manager of any Rubber Land shall make a return to the Rural Board of the amount of rubber produced in the preceding quarter on all rubber land in his possession or control within the Rural Board Area.

Return of produce for previous quarter.

5. As soon as possible after the receipt of the return referred to in section 4 the Rural Board shall within fourteen days of the receipt of such return determine the amount payable in respect of the rubber comprised in the return. Such amount shall be the assessment for the quarter on the lands on which the rubber has been produced, for the purposes of the Municipal Ordinance, and a sum equivalent to 20 per centum of such amount shall be the Assessment for the purposes of the Board of Education Ordinance.

Amount of assessment payable for preceding quarter for each parcel of Rubber Land.

6.—(1) A notice stating the amount of the Assessment mentioned in section 5 for the purposes of the Municipal and Board of Education Ordinances shall be served without delay on the owner or manager submitting the return.

Service of notice.

(2) Such notice required or authorised by this Ordinance to be served on any person may be served by delivering the same to such person, or by forwarding the same by post in a prepaid letter addressed to such person at his usual place of abode or business.

(3) If the notice is served by post it shall be deemed to have been served at the time when the letter containing the notice would be delivered in the ordinary course of post.

(4) A notice required or authorised by this Ordinance to be served on the owner or manager of any land shall be deemed to be properly addressed if addressed by the description of the "owner" or "manager" of such premises without further name or description.

7. If any sum payable as Assessment under section 3 (1) is not paid within one month from the date of publication of the notice referred to in section 3 (1), such sum shall be deemed to be an arrear and the Rural Board may proceed to recover it in the manner prescribed for the recovery of assessment under the Municipal Ordinance.

Recovery of arrears.

8. Any person who without reasonable excuse shall fail to send in the return prescribed by section 4 or who shall send in a return containing any incorrect or incomplete statement unless he shall satisfy the Court that such statement was not made with the intent to evade payment of money payable under this Ordinance shall be liable on conviction before a District Court to a fine not exceeding $1,000.

Penalty for not making return.

9. Any assessment levied under this Ordinance shall be in lieu of an assessment under Ordinance No. 135 (Municipal) and Ordinance No. 114 (Education Board) in respect of the land on which it is levied.

Assessment
in lieu of previous
assessment.

10. Nothing in this Ordinance contained shall be deemed to prevent any Rural Board from assessing any buildings erected on land subject to this Ordinance, or any portion of such land planted with other products, under the Municipal and Board of Education Ordinances, or to prevent a Rural Board assessing any Rubber Land suitable for building purposes within areas approved by the Governor in Council on the capital value of such land in accordance with the provisions of the Municipal and Board of Education Ordinances.

Reservation.

11. The Governor may make rules generally for the purposes of carrying out the provisions of this Ordinance.

Rules.

OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to provide for a fair method of assessment of lands planted with rubber in the Rural Board areas of the Colony.

The procedure prescribed by the Ordinance No. 135 (Municipal) and Ordinance No. 114 (Education Board) has been found to be inadequate and unsatisfactory. It is superseded by the procedure laid down in this Bill.

Attorney-General, S. S.

Inspector.

SCHEDULE B.

RULE 6 UNDER THE MACHINERY ORDINANCE, 1921.

1. The Inspector shall fix the working pressure for boilers coming under examination for the first time by a series of calculations for the strength of the various parts and according to the workmanship and material.

2. When boilers are made throughout of iron, or when boilers have certain parts made of iron, the working pressure shall be fixed by the Chief Inspector.

3. When steel has been used in the construction of new boilers the Inspector is to ask for, and obtain if possible, the steel makers' record of the tests as usually issued with material for boilers.

4. Cylindrical shells:

The working pressure of the cylindrical shells of steel boilers may be obtained from the following formula:

$$\frac{C (T-1) \times E}{D} = W$$

where C = 19.7 when the longitudinal seams are fitted with double butt straps of equal width and of a thickness at least equal to that obtained from the formula for butt straps;

C = 19.05 when the double butt straps are of unequal width—i.e., one strap not covering the outer row of rivets, with the thickness as before;

$C = 18.4$ when the longitudinal seams are lap joints

T = thickness of shell plate, in sixteenths of an inch;

E = the least percentage of strength of longitudinal joints, found as follows:

$$\text{For the plate at the joint, } E = \frac{p-d}{p} \times 100$$

$$\text{For the rivets at the joint, } E = \frac{n \times a}{p \times t} \times \begin{matrix} 85, \text{ when steel rivets are used} \\ 70, \text{ when iron rivets are used} \end{matrix}$$ where p = pitch of rivets, in inches;

d = diameter of rivet holes, in inches;

n = number of rivets used per pitch;

a = sectional area of rivet, in square inches;

t = thickness of plate, in inches;

where rivets are in double shear, $a \times 1.75$ is to be used instead of " a ";

D = mean diameter of shell, in inches;

W = working pressure, in lbs., per square inch.

The constant (C) is to be used with steel of the minimum strength of 26 tons per square inch and not less than 18 per cent extension in 8 inches; when a higher tensile strength is guaranteed, the constant may be proportionately increased up to the maximum tensile for shell-plate—viz., 32 tons per square inch.

5. Double butt straps:

When all the rows of rivets in the butts are of the same pitch, each strap must be at least five-eighths of the thickness of the shell-plate and when the pitch of the outer row of rivets is twice that of centre row, the thickness of each plate is to be in accordance with the following formula:—

$$T_1 = T \frac{5(p-d)}{8(p-2d)}$$ where T_1 = thickness of strap, in sixteenths of an inch;

T = thickness of shell-plate, in sixteenths of an inch;

p = pitch of rivets, in inches;

d = diameter of rivet holes, in inches.

6. In boilers over seven feet in length the shell circumferential seams are to be at least double-riveted, otherwise the working pressure, as found by the formula, may be reduced by four per cent.

It is expected that all rivet holes in new steel boilers be drilled in place. In the case of rivet holes being formed by punching, the Inspector must submit the case for the special consideration of the Chief Inspector.

The pressure of new boilers by calculation will of necessity be affected unless reasonable proof of inspection during construction be produced to the satisfaction of the Chief Inspector.

7. Flat Surface:

The pressure on plates forming flat surfaces is found by the following formula:—

$$\frac{C \text{ (or } c) \times (T + 1)^2}{S - 6} = \text{working pressure};$$

where T = thickness of the plate, in sixteenths of an inch;

S = surface supported, in square inches; and

C = constant for steel } according to the following circum-
 c = constant for iron } stances:

| | | |
|-------------------------|---|--|
| $C = 240$ $c = 192$ | { | when the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the stays are fitted with nuts on both sides of the plates, and doubling strips, not less in width than two-thirds the pitch of the stays and of the thickness of the plates, are securely riveted to the outside of the plates which they cover; |
| $C = 210$ $c = 168$ | { | when the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the stays are fitted with nuts on both sides of the plates, and with washers, not less in diameter than two-thirds the pitch of the stays and of the same thickness as the plates, securely riveted to the outside of the plates which they cover; |
| $C = 165$ $c = 132$ | { | when the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the stays are fitted with nuts on both sides of the plates, and with washers outside the plates, at least three times the diameter of the stay and two-thirds the thickness of the plates which they cover; |
| $C = 112.5$ $c = 90$ | { | when tube-plates are not exposed to the direct impact of heat or flame, and the stays are fitted with nuts; |
| $C = 77$ $c = 70$ | { | when tube-plates are not exposed to the direct impact of heat or flame, and the stay-tubes are screwed into the plates and expanded; |
| $C = 77$ $c = 70$ | { | when the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and the stays are screwed into the plates and riveted over; |

|------------------------|---|---|
| $C = 75$ $c = 60$ | { | when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat, with steam in contact with the plates, and the stays fitted with nuts and washers, the latter being at least three times the diameter of the stay and two-thirds the thickness of the plates which they cover; |
| $C = 67.5$ $c = 54$ | { | when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat, with steam in contact with the plates, and the stays fitted with nuts only; |
| $C = 100$ $c = 80$ | { | when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, with water in contact with the plates, and the stays screwed into the plates and fitted with nuts; |
| $C = 66$ $c = 60$ | { | when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat or flame, with water in contact with the plates, and the stays screwed into the plates and having the ends riveted over to form substantial heads; and |
| $C = 39.6$ $c = 36$ | { | when the plates are exposed to the impact of heat, with steam in contact with the plates screwed into the plates and having the ends riveted over to form substantial heads. |

When the riveted ends of screwed stays are much worn, or when the nuts are burned, the constants should be reduced, but the Inspector must act according to the circumstances that present themselves at the time of the survey, and it is expected that, in cases where the riveted ends of screwed stays in the combustion or fire boxes and furnaces are found in this state, it will be often necessary to reduce the constant 66 to about 40.

When the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame, and doubling plates covering the whole of the flat surfaces are riveted to the plates, the working pressure may be found by the following formula:—

$$\frac{C(\text{or } c)(T + 1)^2 + C_1(\text{or } c_1)(T_1 + 1)^2}{S - 6} = \text{working pressure};$$

where T = thickness of the plate, in sixteenths of an inch;

T_1 = thickness of the doubling plate, in sixteenths of an inch;

S = surface supported, in square inches; and

C (or c) = constant applicable to the case, as previously given.

When doubling plates do not cover the whole of the flat surfaces but are fitted between rows of supporting stays, the strength allowed for them should be two-thirds only of that which would be allowed for similar doubling plates extending beyond and embracing the supporting stays.

In calculating the working pressure of the portion of a tube-plate between nests of tubes, the value of S in the above formula should be found as follows:—

$$\frac{D^2 + d^2}{2} = S$$

where D = horizontal pitch of stay tubes, in inches; and d = vertical " " "

The pitches should be measured from centre to centre of the stay-tubes, and no deduction should be made for any tubes in the contained surface.

In the body of tube-plates the value of S may be found in the ordinary way, and the area of the tubes in the space bounded by the stay-tubes may be deducted.

In cases where plates are stiffened by T- or L-bars and a greater pressure is required for the plates than is allowed by the use of the foregoing constants, the case should be submitted for the consideration of the Chief Inspector.

When a circular flat end is bolted or riveted to an outside ring or flange of a cylindrical shell, S in the formula may be taken as the area of the square inscribed in the circle passing through the centres of the bolts or rivets securing the end, provided that the ring or flange is of sufficient thickness.

8. In flat surfaces of irregular form of staying or where staying is continuous or with stays secured by rivets as in the end plates of Lancashire or Cornish type boilers:—

$$\frac{C \text{ (or } c) \times (T + 1)^2}{2 R^2 - 6} = W$$

When R = the radius of a circle passing through at least three points of support. In such cases C (or c) in the formula is as follows:

C (or c): For staying as described under paragraph 7 of these Instructions, the constants given to meet any particular case may be taken.

C = 115 }
c = 92 } For gusset staying;

C = 210 }
c = 168 } For point of support at boiler shell;

C = 170 }
c = 136 } For point of support at furnace edge;

C = 210 } In way of bottom man-holes when points of support c = 168 } consist of shell and furnaces.

When the plates are not exposed to the impact of heat or flame and doubling plates covering the whole of the flat surfaces are riveted to the plates, the working pressure may be found by the following formula:—

$$\frac{Cs \text{ (orc)}(T + 1) + C \text{ (or c)} (T_1 + 1)^2}{2 R^2 - 6}$$ where T = thickness of plates in sixteenths of an inch;

T_1 = thickness of the doubling plate in sixteenths of an inch;

S = surface supported, in square inches; and

C (or c) = constant applicable to the case, as previously given

R = as above.

9. When the tops of fire-boxes are supported by solid steel girders of rectangular section and are not subjected to a greater temperature than the ordinary heat of steam, the following formula may be employed:—

$$\frac{C \times d^2 \times T}{(W - P) D \times L} = W$$

where W = width of combustion box, in inches;

P = pitch of supporting bolts, in inches;

D = distance between the girders from centre to centre, in inches;

L = length of the girder, in feet;

d = depth of the girder, in inches;

T = thickness of the girder, in inches;

N = number of supporting bolts;

$C = \frac{N \times 1320}{N + 1}$ when the number of bolts is odd;

$C = \frac{(N + 1) 1320}{N + 2}$ when the number of bolts is even;

W^1 = working pressure.

The working pressure for the supporting bolts and for the plate between them should be determined by the rules for the ordinary stays and plates.

When the girders are formed from iron plates, the figure in constant C should be decreased from 1320 to 1200.

10. Dished Ends.—Ends of receivers which are dished and flanged in a hydraulic press, the whole end being operated upon at each heat, may be passed without stays, provided that the radius of the end is not greater than the diameter of the shell to which it is attached and does not exceed 4 feet, that the outer radius of the flange at the root is not less than 3 inches, that the end is made of mild steel of the usual quality, and that it is efficiently annealed after the completion of the setting and flanging; but the maximum pressure allowed without stays should not exceed that found by the following formula:—

$$\frac{90,000 \times T \times h}{D^2} = \text{working pressure ;}$$ where T = thickness of end, in inches ;

D = diameter of shell, inside, in inches ;

h = distance, in inches, from the centre of the end on the inner side to a straight line passing through the points where the curve of the end due to the inner radius, and produced, would intersect the sides of the cylindrical shell, produced if necessary, at the diameter D ; and

$$= R - \sqrt{R^2 - \frac{D^2}{4}}, \text{ in which } R = \text{inner radius of end, in inches.}$$

If there is a man-hole in the end, T should exceed that found by the formula by $\frac{1}{8}$ inch.

Hemispherical ends subject to internal pressure may be allowed double the pressure that is suitable for a cylinder of the same diameter and thickness, but the ends are to be formed of not less than four pieces.

The above instructions do not apply to dished ends of vertical boilers which are subject to the thrust of the uptake in addition to the pressure of steam.

11. Stays for Dished Ends.—Stays, properly distributed, should be fitted to dished ends which are not of the thickness required for flat ends or which do not comply with the requirements stated in paragraph 10 of these Instructions ; but, if the ends are sufficient for the pressure needed, when considered as portions of spheres, the stays, if of solid steel, may have a nominal stress of 20,000 lbs. per square inch of net section and if of iron 16,000 per square inch of net section. If dished ends are not equal to the pressure needed when considered as portions of spheres, they should be stayed as flat surfaces.

12. Openings in Shells, Doors, etc.—The openings in the shells of cylindrical boilers should have their shorter axis placed longitudinally.

13. Compensating rings of at least the same effective sectional area as the plates cut out, and not less in thickness than the plates to which they are attached, should be fitted around all man-holes and openings, or the surrounding portion of the plates should be otherwise efficiently stiffened.

14. It is very desirable that the compensating rings around openings in flat surfaces be made of L- or T-bars. When a ring is not fitted around such an opening and the plate is flanged for compensation, the total depth, D, of the flange should not be less than that given by the following equation:—

$$D = \sqrt{\text{width of opening} \times \text{thickness of plate.}}$$

15. Cast-iron doors should not be passed, and in all cases in which the Inspector finds that cast-iron is employed in the construction of boilers in such a manner as to be subjected to the pressure of steam or water, he should report the circumstances to the Chief Inspector.

16. The neutral portions of boiler shells under steam domes will require to be efficiently stiffened or stayed.

17. In connection with openings in the end of steam receivers, etc., the Inspector should bear in mind that, although the usual strengthening plate may be fitted around such openings, the end is still weaker than if no opening had been made, and the fact of there being a plate or the flange of a neck-piece riveted around the opening may not remove the necessity for having the end suitably stayed.

18. In calculating the working pressure of steel circular furnaces of a length not exceeding 10 feet the following formula may be used:—

$$\frac{105,000 \times T^2}{(L + 1) D} = W$$

where T = thickness, in inches;

L = length in feet (between rings or hoops, if fitted);

D = outside diameter, in inches;

W = working pressure;

provided W does not exceed $$\frac{10,500 \times T}{D}$$

For vertical type, such as the fire-boxes of vertical boilers, the constant is to be reduced 10 per cent.

19. For furnaces of the Adamson type with the distance between the flanges not exceeding (120 T—12) the following formula may be used:—

$$\frac{10,500 \times T}{3 \times D} \left(5 - \frac{L + 12}{60 \times T} \right) = W$$

where T = thickness of plate, in inches;

L = length between centres of flanges, in inches;

D = outside diameter of furnace, in inches;

W = working pressure;

and provided the rings are well and efficiently made.

The working pressure of furnaces of the ribbed, corrugated or suspension type may be ascertained by the following formula:—

$$\frac{1,250 (T - 2)}{D} = W$$

where T = thickness, in sixteenths of an inch;

D = smallest outside diameter of furnaces, in inches

W = working pressure.

20. The foregoing formulæ are to be used for furnaces, the material of which is of boiler flanging quality with a tensile strength of 25 to 30 tons per square inch.

21. A greater compressive stress should not be allowed on tube-plates than 14,000 lbs., which is that used in the following formula:—

$$\frac{(D-d) T \times 28,000}{W \times D}$$

where D = least horizontal distance between centres of tubes, in inches;

d = inside diameter of ordinary tube in inches;

T = thickness of tube-plate, in inches;

W = width of fire-box, in inches.

22. The strength of stays supporting flat surfaces is to be calculated from the smallest part and the stress is not to exceed the following limits:—

for solid iron stays under $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches diameter and welded iron stays 7,000 lbs. per square inch; for solid iron stays not under $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches diameter 8,500 lbs. per square inch;

for steel stays under $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches diameter 9,000 lbs. per square inch; for steel stays not under $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches diameter 10,000 lbs. per square inch; no steel stays are to be welded;

for steel stay-tubes fitted with nuts 8,000 lbs. per square inch; without nuts 7,500 lbs. per square inch;

for iron stay-tubes fitted with nuts 7,000 lbs. per square inch; without nuts 6,500 lbs. per square inch.

23. Boilers coming under inspection for the first time should be tested by hydraulic pressure to at least one-and-a-half times and not more than one-and-three-quarter times the working pressure, ascertained after inspection and calculation.

24. The Inspector is to remember that the boiler mountings, including steam pipes and apparatus connected therewith, other than the engine, form part of the boiler, and must ascertain the efficiency of such parts by calculation and inspection, special attention being given to the safety valves.

SCHEDULE E.

RULE 34 UNDER THE MACHINERY ORDINANCE, 1921.

The horse-power referred to in Rule 34 means total power and is ascertained in the following manner for each unit:—

FOR STEAM ENGINES AND BOILERS.

When D = diameter of cylinder ;

P = working pressure ;

HP = horse-power ;

then for non-condensing single cylinder engines

$$\frac{D^2 \times \sqrt{P}}{36} = \text{HP}$$

and for condensing single cylinder engines ;

$$\frac{D^2 \times \sqrt{P}}{28} = \text{HP}.$$

For two or more cylinders of the same diameter working on the one shaft multiply the horse-power obtained from the single cylinder by the number of cylinders.

For double or triple compound engines, condensing or non-condensing, multiply the horse-power obtained by the applied rule, using the high pressure cylinder diameter, by the number of cylinders.

In the case of an engine to which the above rules do not apply the actual horse-power transmitted through the shaft will be taken as the horse-power.

FOR BOILERS.

When HS heating surface in square feet
HP horse-power

Then :

| | | |
|------------------------------------|--------|------------------------------|
| Colonial Type Boiler | ... | $\frac{HS}{8} = \text{HP}$ |
| Portable Loco. Type Boiler... | | $\frac{HS}{7} = \text{HP}$ |
| Vertical Cross Tube Type Boiler | | $\frac{HS}{4.5} = \text{HP}$ |
| Galloway Type Boiler | ... | $\frac{HS}{7} = \text{HP}$ |
| Lancashire Type Boiler | ... | $\frac{HS}{6.5} = \text{HP}$ |
| Cornish Type Boiler | ... | $\frac{HS}{6.5} = \text{HP}$ |
| Water Tube Type Boiler | ... | $\frac{HS}{10} = \text{HP}$ |
| Vertical Tubular Type Boiler | | $\frac{HS}{6} = \text{HP}$ |
| Tank Type Boiler | | $\frac{HS}{4} = \text{HP}$ |
| Marine Multitubular... | ... | $\frac{HS}{4.5} = \text{HP}$ |
| Cylindrical Multitubular | .. | $\frac{HS}{8.5} = \text{HP}$ |

In the case of a boiler which does not come under the type specified, then the actual output of boiler power under maximum conditions will be taken.

In any steam plant the greatest horse-power obtained by the foregoing rules—i.e., either the horse-power of the engine or the horse-power of the boiler—will be taken as the horse-power of the plant.

GAS OIL OR PETROL ENGINES.

When E = number of explosions per minute ;

A = area of piston in square inches ;

L = stroke in feet ;

P = mean pressure in lbs. per square inch ;

HP = horse-power ;

$$\text{then HP} = \frac{L E A P}{33000}.$$

For multi-cylinder engines, the result as found above is to be multiplied by the number of cylinders, and when the number of cylinders does not exceed four, the product is to be multiplied by 0.9—when it does not exceed six by 0.85 and not exceeding eight by 0.8. For engines operating on the Otto Cycle or constant volume system the mean pressure to be taken at 70 lbs. to the square inch, and for engines on the Diesel or constant pressure system it is to be taken at 95 lbs. to the square inch.

No. 185.—COURT OF INVESTIGATION INTO THE CIRCUMSTANCES ATTENDING THE LOSS OF THE S.S. Perlis OFF PULO PISANG ON THE WEST COAST OF SIAM.

Report of Court.ORDINANCE NO. 125 (MERCHANT SHIPPING).

(SECTION 287 (5) AND RULE 19 OF THE RULES MADE UNDER SECTION 294).

In the matter of a formal investigation held at Penang on the 14th day of October, 1921, before RALPH SCOTT, Esquire, District Judge, assisted by HERBERT STANLEY SHEPARD, Esquire, A. R. HUNTER, Esquire and WILLIAM BROWN, Esquire, Master Mariners, into the circumstances attending the loss of the s.s. Perlis.

The Court, having carefully inquired into the circumstances attending the above-mentioned shipping casualty, finds, for the reasons stated in the Annex hereto, that :—

Question 1.—Was the s.s. Perlis well found and fully equipped on her departure from Trang on the 17th August, 1921?

Answer.—Yes.

Question 2.—Had the s.s. Perlis a proper complement of officers and men on board on her departure from Trang on the 17th August, 1921?

Answer.—Yes.

Question 3.—Was the cargo of the s.s. Perlis properly stowed on her departure from Trang on the 17th August, 1921?

Answer.—Cargo in hold properly stowed. The deck cargo appears to have been unsecured.

Question 4.—What was the cause of the loss of the s.s. Perlis on the 17th August, 1921?

Answer.—Entry of water into the after-hold and stokehold, the after-deck was also flooded.

Question 5.—Was the loss caused by incompetency or misconduct of any of the officers or men, and if so by whose incompetency or misconduct?

Answer.—There is not sufficient evidence before the court to give a definite answer to this question but we consider that no blame can be placed on the officers and crews.

Question 6.—Was there any loss of life attendant upon the loss of the s.s. Perlis?

Answer.—29 persons.

Question 7.—Were all necessary and proper precautions taken to avoid loss of life and to save life during the casualty by those in charge of the s.s. Perlis?

Answer.—Attempts were made to lower the boats and life-belts were served out. Owing to the rapidity with which the ship sank, it was impossible for more to be done.

Dated this 28th day of October, 1921.

R. SCOTT,
Judge.

We concur in the above report.

Annex to the Report.

The s.s. Perlis, a steamer of 48 tons register, left Trang at 11 A.M. on August 17th with a cargo of tin-ore, rice and copra in her holds and a deck cargo of pigs, fowls and damar oil. She carried 11 passengers and a crew of 37. She was drawing 6 feet forward and 7 feet aft and was not fully loaded. The Perlis took the usual course for Penang and passed to the east of Pulau Kapai. The weather had up to then been in no way bad, but about 2 P.M. the wind, which was from the west, increased and the sea began to get up. The seas began to break over the vessel and water to stand on the decks. The Gunner, who was on duty on the after-deck, went up about 2-20 P.M. and reported this to the Master; he was instructed to see that the freeing ports were working properly. The water was then nearly up to the hatch combing. The depth of the water increased and he reported again to the Master, who told him to put life-belts on to the passengers and to lower the boats. He served out life-belts and attempted to lower the boats. Orders were given to jettison the deck cargo and some of it was thrown overboard. About 2-40 P.M. the Master ordered the quartermaster to go "hard aport" and the ship came up into the wind. Several heavy waves struck the vessel and washed over her, the ship then sank stern first. The boats were not got into the water successfully and only 19 persons in all were washed ashore and saved. The Master was washed ashore but died; both engineers were lost. Owing to the loss of the Master and the engineers the evidence as regards time is vague and no evidence was forthcoming on several points which required elucidation. The weather appears to have got really bad after clearing Pulau Kapai; the Gunner stated that it was the worst he had ever experienced; the quartermaster at the wheel stated that after coming up into the wind several enormous seas struck her and washed right over her. The ship rolled heavily after she began to take in water.

None of the witnesses could say whether the engines were slowed down or stopped before she sank; the quartermaster at the wheel could not say whether the Master used the engine room telegraph or not, one fireman said that he heard the telegraph bell sound just before the second engineer called out to him to go up on deck. It is impossible to say what order, if any, was given. In his evidence the fireman deposed that the second engineer called to them to fire up, this shows that there was a loss of steam pressure which would reduce the vessel's steaming power. The loss of pressure was probably caused by the firewood being wet. There is no evidence to show whether this was in any way contributory to the loss of the ship, for example, through inability to use the engine room pump to clear the after-hold of water in it.

The quartermaster stated that there was a list to port, the fireman that there was a list to starboard when he got on deck. As there is no evidence that the hold cargo shifted, it seems probable that the list was caused by the weight of the wind on the ship's side and that after coming up into the wind she probably fell off and was then heeled over into the other quarter.

Evidence was given to show that the hatches were battened down after leaving Trang. The only explanation of the way in which the vessel sank and the rapidity with which it happened seems to be that water got into the after-hold and the Court consider that the battening of the after-hatch was either not properly done to start with, or got loosened afterwards. The hatch was covered with deck cargo and it would have been impossible for the Gunner to make sure whether it was all right or not. Water came into the stokehold shortly before she sank and there seems very little doubt that this found its way in down the two forward bunker manholes, which were not closed with watertight lids. The water in the stokehold was not sufficient to account for the sinking of the vessel, but would accentuate the effect of any water in the after-hold. There do not appear to have been any deck pumps. The only way therefore of freeing the hold from any water which got into it was by using the engine room pumps. There is no evidence whether orders were given for this to be done, or not.

The quartermaster stated that the freeing ports were working properly; if any of the deck cargo got adrift through the rolling of the ship they may have been jammed, but they would have been unable to clear the water on the decks if she shipped a succession of heavy seas. It is impossible to say what the Master's intentions were when he gave the order "hard aport", it may have been done simply to bring her head to the wind, or he may have decided to make back to the lee of Pulau Kapai. The ascertained position of the ship is about $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles south of Pulau Kapai.

If he had run back to Pulau Kapai when the Gunner first reported the presence of water on the decks the ship would in all likelihood have been saved. The Court consider that they are not able on the available evidence to impute any incompetency or misconduct, but do consider that there was an error of judgment in not running back for the lee of Pulau Kapai when the weather got so much worse. The interval of time between the Gunner's first report and the loss of the ship appears to have been only about half an hour.

As regards the measures taken to save life, attempts were made to get the boats into the water. According to the Gunner both boats were swamped in the process of lowering. This does not agree with the evidence of the fireman. The ship appears to have been rolling too heavily to launch the boats successfully. No boat drills were ever held and the crew do not seem to have had any boat station allotted to them. The boat accommodation however would not be sufficient for the crew alone. The Gunner himself appears to have done all he could to save life in the short time before the ship foundered.

According to the manifest the deck cargo on the Perlis consisted of 85 baskets of pigs, 42 baskets of fowls, 345 tins of damar oil and 410 bundles of damar, together with a large supply of firewood stacked over the bunkers. It appears not to have been secured in any way. This seems to be an excessive amount of deck cargo for a small vessel of 48 tons register with an upper structure such as the Perlis to be carrying under the prevailing weather conditions on a voyage from Trang to Penang. In the event of the ship encountering heavy weather, as on this occasion, the deck cargo would tend to go adrift with the rolling of the ship. The working of the ship would be interfered with and it would be impossible for the hatches to be got at to see that they were still properly battened down. The cargo adrift would be a danger in itself to the crew, if it was attempted to jettison it.

Judge.
